“ My sincerest sympathies and condolences to all of Susan's family and friends. This is such a loss and such a shock. The memories of Susan's presence in Boston a couple of years ago with both parents as we explored the historic North End and ate in that tiny hole-in-the-wall Italian place with the great food doesn't really help to lighten the grief of missing her. And seeing Susan at Arisia Con and the Deryni fan dinner in Boston the one year that Katherine was guest at that con is a memory that sparkles all on its own. I see her with her head tilted toward the person who was speaking, a smile on her face and her eyes sparkling with interest and intelligence. Every year, DarkoverCon was brightened by her presence. Her lovely costumes made her look like a fairy tale princess and she was always comfortable wearing them. She even managed to talk me into wearing some of my costumes there, which I had previously saved for other conventions that were more intimate, where I knew more people. Her wit and will made things happen more easily. She took charge amongst the grasshoppers, herding them into getting a move on when it was needed. And it was needed! :) She spoke your mind forthrightly, but also kindly, which was needed, too, sometimes. I admired that. All those Deryni dinners over the years at Darkover and all the times at the Rampant Lion Pub cannot be overshadowed by missing her. As many times as we stayed up really late at cons and talked school department --- only to discover that education professionals, special ed or library media teachers, are the same whether we're in MA or IL --- or gossiped Deryni and came up with amazingly involved plots and plotlines or speculated about who was doing what to whom in the Deryni world and *why*, we still managed to talk about the serious topics, as well: family, relationship, religion. It wasn't an easy couple of years for her these past few, but she were coming shining through them, stronger than she knew and a great inspiration. I was looking forward to seeing where that would lead. I *know* that things are much better for her now, but her bright smile will be much missed here. Farewell, for a while. *****blessed be, Julianne

“ Rest in Peace Sue! You and your smiling face will be sorely missed at Unity. To your family - my deepest condolences for your loss. Sue was an amazing teacher and a wonderful person. You should see the roses outside her classroom door, they are a reflection of the love her students have for her. God bless!
